

I BioAnthropological Meeting: a multidisciplinary approach

Dear all,

We are honored to invite all those interested in attending the I BioAnthropological Meeting: a multidisciplinary approach, which will take place on the 31st of May and 1st of June, 2013, at the Department of Life Sciences (former Anthropology) of the Faculty of Sciences and Technology of the University of Coimbra (DCV-FCTUC). This meeting is already supported by the Department itself, as well as by the Research Centre for Anthropology and Health (CIAS) and the Group of Studies in Human Evolution (GEEvH).

The I BAM is the first event of international scope in the field of biological anthropology fully organized by students, to be held in Portugal. The idea of this encounter arises from the urge to be closely involved in the practical applicability of the knowledge intersection, at the specific level of Biological Anthropology. This meeting aims to present the latest research that has been developed in several areas of this field, highlighting specific themes, such as Forensic Anthropology, Population Genetics, Human Ecology, Primatology, Human Evolution and Anthropology of Past Populations.

The I BAM also intends to give students and/or researchers the opportunity to expose their work, either by oral or poster presentations.

For further information about the Programme, the registration process, and the Meeting itself, please visit the website and our Facebook page:
