

The Prehistoric Society Europa Conference 2023

Peopling the Past: Reflecting on Prehistoric Europe

University of Cambridge, 2-4th June 2023

Call for Papers: early career researchers

The Prehistoric Society in collaboration with the Department of Archaeology, University of Cambridge, invite early career researchers to submit a paper proposal for the Europa conference 2023.

Prof Marie Louise Stig Sørensen, McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research, University of Cambridge, will be honoured with the Europa prize for her contribution to European prehistory. The conference will look at issues explored in Professor Stig Sørensen's research on the Bronze Age in Scandinavia, Central Europe and England, investigating several aspects of life and death in Bronze Age communities. Her research also includes a focus on gender studies in prehistory and cultural heritage preservation.

Conference presentations will take place over two days (2nd-3rd June), with the first day devoted to early career researchers. Along with two full days of lectures, the conference will also include a half-day field trip to the Museum of Archaeology and Anthropology and Wandlebury hill fort on Sunday 4th June.

Confirmed speakers for Saturday 3rd include: John Robb (University of Cambridge); Philip Stockhammer (Ludwig-Maximilians-University of Munich); Katharina Rebay-Salisbury (Austrian Archaeological Institute of the Academy of Sciences); Helle Vandkilde (University of Aarhus); Harry Fokkens (University of Leiden); Joanna Sofaer (University of Southampton); Magdolna Vicze (National Museum of Hungary).

Call for papers

Please email a title and abstract of no more than 350 words to Jess Bates (jessica.bates@york.ac.uk) by Sunday 25th September 2022. Please include your current title and organisational affiliation in the email. Authors will be notified if their proposals were accepted by 31 October 2022.

Call for posters

If you are interested in submitting a poster proposal, please email a title and abstract of no more than 150 words to the same address by Sunday 30th April 2023. Please include in the email your current title and organisational affiliation.

For more information on the Europa Conference Peopling the Past: Reflecting on Prehistoric Europe please visit the Prehistoric Society website.

Online booking for this conference and the field trip will open in November 2022.

The Prehistoric
Society

UNIVERSITY OF
CAMBRIDGE